Persona 1:
Name: Chistian Washer
Age: 53
Bio: Christian works as a university history professor and has been playing DnD since 1983 when he was in high school. He began to play DnD online in 2020 because of the pandemic to keep in touch with his friends. He has a PhD in History and Computer Science, and regularly works on research papers about history for peer reviewed journals. Despite working as a programmer in the 1990s, he has not kept up with technological developments since the turn of the century and struggles with using modern technology.

Persona 2:
Name: Jessica Steward
Age: 20
Bio: Jessica is a college junior majoring in biochemistry. She's played DnD for about a year at this point and wants to try her hand at DMing a game of her own, but is unsure of how to go about doing so. She has done a bit of research in looking at videos online about DMing, but still feels unsure about doing it herself. Jessica is moderately tech savvy, being quite active on social media and using applications like google docs for school projects, but doesn't have much experience with online DnD websites. She also values organization and thorough planning, but is having trouble organizing the google docs she's made for her game in an intuitive way, often losing npc descriptions, only to find them after the session has ended.

Persona 3:
Name: Jonathan Baker
Age: 40
Bio: Jonathan is an author who attended Florida International University and graduated with a Bachelor of arts in English Literature. He has written several well known novels taking inspiration from his interest in D&D.
Born in California in 1982, Baker was introduced to D&D by his father when he was 11 years old and has both played and hosted multiple sessions over the course of his life. His experience in D&D has served to refine his storytelling techniques.
Baker has been using Roll 20 to host his D&D sessions, and one of his complaints is how messy the page can become. He has taken to writing down everything in order to keep track of everything happening.